Dyed Furs Now Losing Their Popularity—Evening Wraps Shown in Geranium Pink and Amber Crepe are Bordered With Wide Bands of Coney, Dyed the Exact Shade of the Material—Affairs for the Bride.

FURS OF DYED HUE NOW LOSING CASTE.

The pendulum of public favor is slowly swinging away from dyed furs. Their vogue has been the cause of their downfall. It has been the old story of too much popularity—its note has been too insistently struck. Once they began to make their way into the cheap shops and on ordinary garments, the exclusive creators of fashion began a process of repudiation. In the modish shops now gowns and suits are not made up in conjunction with garish colored furs, or with few artificially colored furs of any kind. It seems too bad they should be going out of vogue just now, especially since the crudity naturally attendant on all early attempts has been done away with and really artistic work is being turned out along these lines. Exquisite in their tone and perfect in their harmony the evening wraps which have been shown in geranium pink and amber crepe de chine and bordered with wide bands of coney dyed the identical shade of the material have been marvels of beauty. The fox dyed the new pink or the popular canary shade will doubtless continue to adorn to a certain extent the evening gowns and outside wraps, that is at least until their imitation has penetrated too far into all kinds of shops and places and had its charm and novelty, in Parisian eyes, worn off.

Japanese maroon, the brownish fur with the wonderful golden glint running through its soft darkness, is one of the natural furs that is becoming popular. It is rather a costly fur, but is stunningly shown on some of the new models. One evening frock of amber velvet had the skirt made up entirely of flounces with the golden glint maroon decorating the edges. The corsage was trimmed with narrow bands of the same fur, the grille being of amber satin beaded with crystals. White coney headed with rhinestones is an extremely effective and yet too expensive mode of trimming. It sells as low as $1 a yard and is really exquisite combined with white chamois or satin. All white fur costumes are excessively modish just now, the effect of the white continued to a white turban with hugely high aigrettes, white and sparkling with stones.

"Putois," a long haired, delightful, silky fur, somewhat resembling a lynx, but decidedly more durable, has a general mottled appearance and is light near the skin and darker toward the ends. It is being used now for the new shaped fur collar with its merely fictitious effect. The lighter collar of this fur looks extremely well on a black gown.

A LINEN SHOWER.

A linen shower given recently shows the girlish spirit that prompted the prettily arranged affair. It was quite a secret, too, and was planned at the home of one of the promoters. When the bride-elect arrived, one of the young women tied a pretty little white sunbonnet on her head, and the other guests very solemnly presented her with a willow clothes basket. The presentation speech was of a fun-provoking nature, full of the great responsibilities of washday and, most impressive of all what to do when the laundress fails to arrive. Solemnly, and in a very ladylike manner each one then stopped forward and presented a cake of laundry soap. Then the parlor door was opened and there upon a clothes line hung an array of linen pieces such as would delight the heart of any young woman about to enter upon her own home duties. The articles were all pinned onto the line with decorated clothespins.

WEDDING COURTESIES.
If you are invited to a wedding at a distance and cannot accept the invitation, you should write a letter in due time, expressing your regrets. It is not absolutely necessary to send a gift, but if you do the present should be sent to the prospective bride, even though she should be a stranger. The attached card will indicate to the groom that the gift came from one of his personal friends. Should the invitation be accepted, the gift should arrive on the wedding day or the night before and depart immediately after the ceremony. Guests may go to the hotel if there are many invited from out of town. They should pay their own hotel expenses. Even when distant friends attend a wedding they should send their gifts ahead of them, to arrive before the wedding day.

DINNER FOR ENGAGED PERSONS.
When giving a dinner compliment to a bride-elect, one may invite only her women acquaintances. In such a case the prospective bridegroom is not an invited guest. A dinner to which both are invited usually includes the man and his fiancée, her prospective bride attendants, and his best man and ushers, or his most intimate friends. It is a pretty custom to present a bouquet of roses or favorite flowers to the bride-elect at a dinner.

NOVEL SCENT BAG.
A novel heart-shaped scent bag is made of sheer white silk marquisette and is filled with dried roses and additionally perfumed with the natural odor of the flowers. The same idea may be effectively carried out in violets or in lavender. The rose and violets are particularly good for perfuming the contents of bureau drawers, wardrobes, trunks, etc., imparting the delicate fragrance of the natural flower to the gown, waist or lingerie. The lavender bags are appropriate for perfuming the linen closet or chest. The dried flowers in their natural colorings are visible through the marquisette cases, making them very attractive.

EGYPTIAN BASKET.
A reddish brown wicker basket, padded and lined with light brown satin makes a lovely gift to the graduate or bride, if it contains an exquisite hand-painted, cut glass bottle of Egyptian bouquet perfume, and a small satin bag of Egyptian bouquet sachet powder attached to the handle of the basket by means of narrow satin ribbon. The basket itself will prove a permanent ornament to the dressing table, as a convenient receptacle for trinkets, owing to its padded satin bed.

A PRACTICAL GIFT.
Her club, composed of five members besides herself, each gave to the bride a beautiful flounce for a skirt. The upper part of the skirt was made of a plain material, and arranged so that the flounces could be buttoned on when a change was desired.

ORANGE BOUILLON.
For a yellow luncheon party orange bouillon is a most attractive and original way to serve one's soup, and will be found equally as delicious as it is unexpected. Squeeze about a dozen oranges, sometimes it will require a few more or less than a dozen, but enough to give a quart of juice, to this add one-half teaspoonful of sugar, and four pinches of water, and a little salt. Let the juice come to a boil and then add immediately two pounds of powdered arrowroot—stir slowly until it thickens when the soup is done. Do not let the orange juice boil or it will be bitter. Serve in bouillon cups.

A most delicious dessert for luncheon or dinner may be made with what is called in the hotels "French Vanilla Ice Cream," but this is merely vanilla custard frozen like ice cream—and frozen in a can, not a brick. It should be scooped out with a large spoon, serving one spoonful to each person in a glass bowl, and decorating each dish with six or eight thin straw-berries. The little brick that is the all important factor in this dessert is that the strawberries must not be put on the ice cream until just the minute before serving, for as soon as the berries become a bit cold the choicest flavor is lost.

FORWARD MARCH, A SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Rev. G. F. Rasmussen.
It is always so. This incident in the history of Israel is no isolated incident bit of history. It is a type of the universal experience of humanity in its pilgrimage toward the better day that lies before us. Before humanity lies the estate of better things of better thoughts, of better deeds, of better joys, of better lives, of better government, of better business, of better mechanics and of better society. And always the chain of a Jordan of difficulty yawns between. It is such a break with the present, such a different state, that it seems impossible to proceed. So it was with Israel of old as they reached the other side of the river Jordan which separated them from the land of promise toward which God had been leading them.

THE LESSON TEXT.
The Authorized Version.
7 And the Lord said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.
8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall stand still in Jordan.

9 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, Come hither and hear the words of the Lord your God.
10 And Joshua said, Hereby ye shall know that the living God is among you, and that he will without fail drive out from before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Jebusites.
11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth passeth over before you into Jordan.

12 Now therefore take ye twelve men out of the tribes of Israel, out of every tribe a man.
13 And it shall come to pass, as soon as the soles of the feet of the priests that bear the ark of the Lord, the Lord of all the earth, shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that the waters of Jordan shall be cut off from the waters that come down from above, and they shall stand upon an heap.
14 And it came to pass, when the people removed from their tents, to pass over Jordan, and the priests bearing the ark of the covenant before the people;

15 And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water (for Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest).
16 That the waters which came down from above stood and rose up upon an heap very far from the city Adam, that is beside Zaretan; and those that came down toward the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failed, and were cut off; and the people passed over right against Jericho.

17 And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground until all the people were passed clean over Jordan.

Golden Text.—Fear thou not, for I am with thee.—Isa. 41:10.
Yes, that better state seems so separated from us that a gap yawns before us that apparently is impassable. How can we ever make the passage from the state where we are to the state where we ought to be? The ideal seems to belong to another world entirely. It smiles tantalizingly at us from the other side. But it seems to say, "This is a beautiful land, but you can't come over. This belongs to a different order of things."

Difficulties always confront us in our march to better things. But the Joshua of undaunted courage and unwavering faith, and unwavering loyalty to duty, who are ever the leaders of the march of progress, hear the voice of the Creator who has created the world for our attainment, say, "Go forward, Difficulties will vanish before you."

And it is so. Not only are we surmounting difficulties, but as we proceed, they actually vanish before us. The Stevensons were puzzling their brains as to how to prevent the wheels of the first locomotive which they were inventing from slipping on the rails, when one of them said, "Perhaps they won't slip. Let's try it." And they did not slip. Darius Green dreams of flying in the air, but is prevented by the force of gravity. Others try to conquer the air by balloons, but are prevented by the force of the wind. But even as we go forward, some one up the line cuts off our difficulties by the invention of small gasoline motors, and the impossible land is entered. Morse sees the possibility of writing his messages across the continent with the long arm of the telegraph wire. But people say that it is an idle dream. But he goes forward. It does seem impossible. Time after time he is halted, and progress seems out of the question. Then he says he prays, and before him there opens a way out of his difficulty, till at last he has reached the land of his promise.

The inventor of the cotton picking machine moved forward in spite of the most appalling obstacles. Time after time he failed. One difficulty was removed only to find another coming. People thought he was crazy. He had to continue his work in secret to avoid unbearable ridicule. When at last his feet trod on the solid ground of success and he found himself in the land of achievement.

Reformers see the better state of sobriety, of chastity, of honesty, and of brotherhood. "It is no use," says the world about him, that belongs to another world, the very nature of things prevents us. But he presses forward and problems are solved and obstacles overcome. And if we but go forward courageously we, too, shall enter the land of better things.

Youth looks at the high peaks of attainment in the state of clean, noble, honest living, and even as he looks the world points out to him the yawning chasm that will not allow him to pass. But if he will only proceed in the sure faith that the Creator does not defraud us, nor put lying promises before us, and nerves himself with the help of the Omnipotent, he, too, will find that the way is open to the forward march of faith and obedience.

Here is a new price on a competent Adder. On a machine that is rapid, full-size and infallible. The very latest machine, built by men who know, is one of the largest metal-working shops. It is an individual Adder, to be placed on one's desk, close to one's books and papers. To take the place of the central machine requiring skilled operators. It is also intended for offices and stores where costly machines are a luxury. The price is due to utter simplicity, and to our enormous output. Seven keys do all the work.

Each copied number is shown up for checking before the addition is made. The machine will add, subtract and multiply. With very slight practice anyone can compute a hundred figures a minute. And the machine never makes mistakes. Countless offices, large and small, are getting from these machines the highest class of service.
